Dan Coats, the US National Intelligence Director, on Sunday said the unverified dossier was'sourced' and 'credible'. The report claims Mr Trump, and others close to him, regularly meet Russian officials, and has close ties to Russian officials. A former British intelligence officer who made the salacious allegations about Trump and Russia in a dossier has admitted that a news website he works for did pay money to a Washington-based Russian government-linked lawyer who in turn passed the dossier onto a British investigative firm. 'That is why I think it is credible,' Dan Coats, the director of the US National Intelligence, told Fox News Sunday. 'It is sourced, and now, we're getting information that has come out that he (Donald Trump) has had associates, I'm talking about his father, that has gone to Russia. That shows you that there is some level of co-operation between him and his associates and the Russians.' Rob Goldstone, the co-founder of an initiative to bring together the British public with Vladimir Putin, admitted that BuzzFeed had offered to pay Mr Skripal's legal bills, but said he was not aware it had been done before the dossier was published. The allegations about Donald Trump's alleged ties to Russia have intensified following a meeting in which Donald Trump's son, Donald Trump Jr, met a Russian lawyer in June 2016 'I don't know about any money being exchanged,' he said, adding he was not aware whether the dossier had been used as part of the dossier. 'I think we were interested in getting the facts

Senate Passes Higher Minimum Wage Bill Republican opposition in the Iowa Senate overcame enough Democrat defections Tuesday to pass Senate File 2125, a bill raising the minimum wage for Iowa employees to $9 an hour by 2015. The bill passed with a 27-23 vote. The bill now heads back to the Iowa House of Representatives. The bill would raise the minimum wage to $7.75 an hour on July 1, 2011, then increase the rate to $8.25 in 2012 and $9 in 2013. It would continue to increase at $1.25 an hour each July 1 following until it reaches the federal minimum of $7.25 in 2014. Democrats introduced the bill. Republican Sen. Amy Sinclair was the bill's primary sponsor. Sinclair said Tuesday that some of her arguments were hurt because Republicans ignored the bill for too long. She pointed to a second minimum wage bill that failed last session. She said she feels good about the fact that it passed when she heard on Tuesday that her Republican colleagues left her alone to lead the charge on the bill and didn't put the bill on the calendar last month like they normally do. When it came time to vote, Sinclair said she got a little "unsteady" as she waited for the roll call. When it was over, she said she was "choked up" and "crying" in her office with a couple of her fellow Democrats. "I was really proud of what we were able to accomplish," Sinclair said, "and I was really surprised because I have felt the entire time that we have been in opposition in the past that we have been treated with great disrespect and we've had good intentions but bad timing." Of course, there are many Republicans that see eye-to-eye with Sinclair and the Democrats on the bill. 3e33713323
